Bible Reading: Jeremiah 4:19-28

In our reading, Jeremiah used images from the creation poem in the first chapter of Genesis: light, humans, birds, and plants. But, this time, everything that God had created was unmade: the light had gone; human beings were no more; the birds of the air had disappeared, and plants were nowhere to be seen. In other words, the world had returned to its former condition in Genesis: a formless void. This destruction of creation, however, was not the result of natural disasters or the likes. Jeremiah claimed that the destruction that he envisioned was the result of the foolishness of his people, of their own evil doings. Indeed, the consistent message that we find throughout Jeremiah's book is this: true peace and security are found not in warhorses or chariots or swords, but in doing justice. Unless the people repented, destruction was inevitable, and it would engulf not only the nation, but also the entire creation itself.

Quote for the Week

"On the mysterious journey of life, it is important to enjoy the travel, even while never knowing the route or the destination."

Anonymous

The prayer of the righteous is powerful and effective. Elijah was a human being like us, and he prayed fervently that it might not rain, and for three years and six months it did not rain on the earth. Then he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain and the earth yielded its harvest. My brothers and sisters, if anyone among you wanders from the truth and is brought back by another, you should know that whoever brings back a sinner from wandering will save the sinner's soul from death and will cover a multitude of sins.
